you that the Indian children never come to school a day A few weeks before school began Dave McKinzie, Baxter, and Jim Yarnell, the Chief, and told him that we had entered into a contract with the Government to send the Indian children to school and that we would pay him fifty dollars a month for each of the children we got to go to the school. We got seventy children to go to the school. The school began on schedule time April 16th, and all children, after several weeks were sent to their the chief and Indian police to hunt up the children to school. He said it was a school house that and that they were going to school down there this We thought fifty dollars as much as we could safely
