WASHINGTON, D.C. – The Bureau of Indian Affairs Office of Justice Services (OJS) will hold its fourth training session to improve the trial advocacy skills of tribal court prosecutors, defenders and judges on October 23-25, 2012, in Chinle, Ariz., on the Navajo Nation Reservation. This training will focus on cases dealing with domestic violence.

The session, the fourth of six scheduled for Indian Country, is being conducted under the Tribal Court Trial Advocacy Training Program, a joint effort by the Department of the Interior and the Department of Justice. The Program furthers the mandate of the Tribal Law and Order Act of 2010 to strengthen tribal sovereignty over criminal justice matters on federal Indian lands by sharpening the skills of those who practice within the tribal court system.

The Program is the result of a collaborative effort by the OJS and DOJ's Access to Justice Initiative to offer trial advocacy training with courses designed specifically for tribal courts and free training to the judges, public defenders and prosecutors who work in them. Training is provided in three areas – domestic abuse, illegal narcotics and sexual assault on children and adults. Instructional materials are prepared by experts knowledgeable about tribal court issues. The Program is unique because it also includes training specifically for public defenders.

The remaining two sessions will be held Nov. 13-15 in Seattle, Wash., and January 15-17, 2013, in Albuquerque, N.M. Earlier sessions were held July 24-26, 2012, in Duluth, Minn.; August 14- 16, in Ignacio, Colo.; and September 11-13 in Great Falls, Mont.
