They are looking for input on how the Government could be reorganized in order to streamline services to tribes. How about abolishing the BIA and let Tribes handle their own business directly with the Department of the Interior?

The BIA has administered federal Indian policies since 1824, and its history is marked by episodes of appalling mismanagement. Some of the BIA's scandals include the Indian trust-fund mess that was recently resolved in a $3.4 billion legal settlement—after a century of federal bungling.

Bureau of Indian Affairs opens listening sessions on reorganization

Secretary Ryan Zinke has promised potentially 'bold' changes at the Department of the Interior.
