Habitat Survey of Nation Lands

Description of Survey Methods:

- This ecological habitat survey of the Oneida Nation lands was based on three survey methods: a review of aerial photographs and wetlands maps, cruise inventories, and field inspections/plant species inventories. Habitat types were assessed by the first two methods for all Oneida Nation lands. Plant species inventories were conducted at approximately 15% of the Nation's lands. Culturally influenced lands, such as areas devoted to agricultural, residential, and commercial uses, were found to account for approximately 30% of the Nation's lands.
- Review of Wetlands Maps and Aerial Photographs included an analysis of National Wetlands Inventory maps, NYSDEC Freshwater Wetlands maps, and aerial photographs to determine habitat types. This method differentiated between agricultural lands, successional old fields, forests/shrub lands, emergent marshes, forested/shrub wetlands, artificial/farmed ponds, and headwater streams.
- Cruise Inventories entailed field surveys of the Nation's lands to obtain general information on existing habitat conditions. This method differentiated between various types of culturally influenced habitats (including residential and commercial areas, agricultural lands, golf courses, Turning Stone Resort and Casino, etc.), wetlands, successional old fields, shrub lands, secondary woodlands, and mature woodlands.
- Field Inspections and Plant Species Inventories involved detailed field surveys of representative lands in October, 2005 and May, 2006, identification of plant species, and characterization of habitats according to Reschke (2000). This method differentiated between successional old fields, successional shrub lands, successional hardwoods, Hemlock-Northern Hardwood forests, Beech-Maple Hardwood forests, emergent marshes, shrub swamps, Red Maple Hardwood swamps, Hemlock Hardwood forests, floodplain forests, headwater streams, Northern White Cedar swamps, artificial canals, artificial/farmed wetlands, and agricultural lands.
