ARTICLE V – SALINAN TRIBE GENERAL MEMBERSHIP

Section 1: Definition of our Historical Indian Tribe

The Historical Indian Tribe that is being claimed for the Salinan Tribe is from the Indian population that existed from both Mission San Antonio de Padua (located in the County of Monterey, California), and Mission San Miguel Arcángel (located in the County of San Luis Obispo, California), during the Spanish Mission Era. The Spanish Mission Era shall be defined as the period from 1769 until the adoption of the Mexican Secularization Laws of 1834.

This Indian mission population originally came from the surrounding Indian villages that existed just prior to the founding of the two missions based on the result of Spanish policy at the time. The Spanish baptism records from these missions designate those who were baptized as Indian under such Spanish terms including gentile, india/indio, or neófito/neófito. (These records, and translations, are available through the archivist at the Diocese of Monterey located in Monterey, California.)

Historical evidence demonstrates a likelihood that the Indian populations at both Mission San Antonio de Padua (located in the County of Monterey, California), and Mission San Miguel Arcángel (located in the County of San Luis Obispo, California), became an entity consisting of regional tribes that were both socially connected and culturally similar from the regional Indian villages living in the geographic area. Both missions belonged to the same linguistic stock (later termed Salinan) as researched by numerous linguists during the 19th and 20th centuries including Dr. T.T. Waterman, J. Alden Mason, Alex S. Taylor, H.W. Henshaw, Dr. A.L. Kroeber, and John P. Harrington.

Further, the Salinan Tribe also defines the following Indians, from the Historical Indian Tribe, as the true claimed ancestors of our current members and our continuous tribal entity.
